

What is Research?

[00:00:00] [Beginning of Recorded Material]

Onscreen text reads: WHAT IS RESEARCH?

Marek Bruckner: So to me research is asking a question and then seeking an answer and you can seek an answer either through other people's researcher work or you can seek an answer through your own research.

Austen Hall: Research to me means getting the chance to engage deeply with a topic that you're interested in. I think any topic kind of worth spending time on you're not going to be able to just sit in your room by yourself and generate an [00:00:30] interesting discussion.

Khambrel Roach: Research means look up, analyze, study.

Annie Cornelius: For me, research is about finding a topic that you're interested in and then learning more about it.

Christine Gurley: Research means sorting through a whole lot of information but trying to find it means learning how a certain discipline talks and [00:01:00] figuring out how they think.

Victor Vo: Research means seeking and finding credible information that I can utilize for whatever purpose I'm trying to accomplish.

Marisol Palaez: I think research is the kind of recompilation of previous knowledge in order to enlighten yourself or enlighten your peers or if you're, you know, publishing something then, you know, whole community [00:01:30] about a certain topic.

Onscreen text reads: WHERE DO YOU DO YOUR RESEARCH?

Victor Vo: I usually do my research anywhere that I can take my laptop.

Jean Pierre Sanchez: Usually apartment or dorm room whichever. I really don't come to the library that much. I've all, like I didn't start coming til like last semester a lot especially during finals.

Khambrel Roach: My personal favorite place is the bottom floor CLT I think is the most serene place for me.

Austen Hall: I like to do it here in the library because if I find something that [00:02:00] I can't get off a database that I need to get, you know, from the library it's real easy to just pop on over and grab it from the shelves.

Christine Gurley: I'll usually be like on my bed or in the library in a chair somewhere where there's the little niches so people don't really walk past and I'll just spend a couple of hours doing one thing.
